Register Now! CHD's 2nd Annual Conference • Nov. 3-5

08/09/23 • BIG PHARMA › NEWS

'So Many Pitfalls': Feds Push School-Based Health Centers as Critics Sound Alarm Over Lack of Parental Consent

Supporters of school-based health centers tout improved access to healthcare for the underserved — but critics say rapidly expanding the centers could allow children to get vaccines and mental health counseling without parental consent.

By Suzanne Burdick, Ph.D.

47

Miss a day, miss a lot. Subscribe to The Defender's Top News of the Day.* It's free.

The recent push by the U.S. federal government to rapidly expand the use of school-based health centers (SBHCs) across the country has some critics concerned children will receive, or be pressured into receiving, unnecessary or unwanted medical interventions — including vaccines — without their parents' knowledge or consent.

Georgia attorney Nicole Johnson, co-director of Georgia Coalition for Vaccine Choice and a consultant to the Children's Health Defense's (CHD) legal team, told The Defender:

> "It's scary because these health centers sound really good. In some of the rural and poor communities especially, this is going to seem like a really good way for children to get this care.
>
> "And while there may be some conveniences, there are so many concerns with allowing medical exams and treatments at school. Parents need to be involved in all medical decisions and I fear they are being left out of the equation."

SBHCs are intended to provide high-quality healthcare to kids by offering "primary care, mental health care, and other health services in schools," particularly in underserved communities.

This includes services "to prevent disease, disability, and other health conditions or their progression" such as "immunizations" and "well-child care."

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's (CDC) Community Preventive Services Task Force, SBHCs can improve educational and health outcomes.

The CDC also considers SBHCs as integral to its Whole School, Whole Community, Whole Child model because they provide health services and mental health counseling.

But critics like Johnson worry that though there may be benefits to SBHCs, there are also downsides — including lack of regulation of the centers and the fact that parents may not be aware of the broad range of medical and behavioral services being provided in their children's schools.

SBHCs have been linked to higher human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccination rates, according to a 2022 report by Harvard University's Center for Health Law and Policy Innovation and the University of California Davis Comprehensive Cancer Center.

The report — written expressly to "address vaccine hesitancy" — concluded: "These results suggest SBHCs create a considerable opportunity … to implement successful school based HPV vaccination programs."

Merck, the maker of the Gardasil HPV vaccine, is one of the funders of the School-Based Health Alliance, a large networking organization that "works on policy, standards, data, and training issues" regarding SBHCs.

RFK Jr./Hooker NEW book: Vax-Unvax. Order Now!

Federal, state authorities pour taxpayer money into school-based health centers

The idea of running full-service health centers in public schools has been around for more than two decades, but events in 2022 caused SBHCs to catch on like wildfire.

Congress and President Joe Biden in June 2022 passed the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act, which allowed the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to award $50 million in grants to states "for the purpose of implementing, enhancing, or expanding the provision" of healthcare assistance through SBHCs using Medicaid or the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP).

The legislation charged the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) with expanding access to Medicaid healthcare services — including behavioral health services — in schools, and reducing the administrative burden for states and schools.

A CMS spokesperson told The Defender that Medicaid and CHIP now can provide reimbursement for services given in SBHCs for children and youth who are covered by those programs.

Additionally, in May 2022 HHS awarded $25 million in grants to 125 SBHCs "to improve and strengthen access to school-based health services in communities across the country."

State public officials also are dedicating funds to expand SBHCs. For instance, the governor of Georgia in fall 2022 announced an investment of $125 million to expand school-based health services to rural communities in Georgia.

Pediatricians can 'partner' with schools

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) supports SBHCs and said in a policy statement that pediatricians may act as "sponsors" by partnering with a school to establish the SBHC as an extension of their practice or by supervising the care given at a SBHC.

"Sponsors also include local hospitals that can provide prearranged after-hours and school vacation coverage and financial support for SBHCs," the AAP said.

The Defender reached out to the AAP statement's lead authors for comments on how parental consent is handled in SBHCs, but they did not respond by our publication deadline.

SBHCs also have the support of the School-Based Health Alliance. In addition to funding from Merck, the alliance receives financial support from HHS' Health Resources & Services Administration.

Documents obtained in June by CHD revealed that the HHS gave $4.7 million to research headed by a Merck consultant that focused on developing "The Announcement Approach Training," where providers simply "announce" a child will be receiving the HPV vaccine as part of a routine office visit, instead of discussing it with the family first.

The government-funded research also is testing whether financial incentives and peer pressure can "nudge" doctors to change how they talk to their patients in order to increase HPV vaccine uptake among adolescents.

Meanwhile, a fierce battle is taking place in multiple states where some lawmakers are pushing legislation that would allow minors to receive treatments to prevent sexually transmitted diseases — including Merck's HPV vaccine — without parental knowledge or consent.

'So many pitfalls … so many ways for someone else to be making parental decisions'

Justine Tanguay, an attorney with nearly 20 years of experience advocating for children in various areas of the law, told The Defender:

> "Don't be fooled! This year many schools will be sending home blanket consent-to-treat forms for parents to sign.
>
> "Parents need to be aware that these forms are not the traditional authorization requests for the school nurse to give first-aid or to treat minor illnesses."

Tanguay, CHD's director of campaign and research, explained that the forms may give those who run the SBHC the legal authorization to provide "comprehensive healthcare."

This could include — but may not be limited to — "the ability to provide preventative treatment, behavioral and mental health services, reproductive counseling, lab and prescription services, various medical screenings, immunizations and disease management," Tanguay said.

Moreover, SBHC staff will have "direct access" to a minor child, Tanguay said, "as well as the ability to encourage a minor child to make personal healthcare decisions without the need to consult with and seek approval from a parent."

"The opportunity to circumvent both parental rights and informed consent is ripe for abuse," Tanguay warned.

Johnson agreed, saying, "There are just so many pitfalls here, so many ways for someone else to be making parental decisions."

Johnson shared with The Defender a consent form currently used in a school district north of Atlanta, Georgia.

The form says nothing about parents being notified before, during or after treatment. It reads:

> "I hereby voluntarily give my consent for [my child] to receive health services with Georgia Highlands Medical Services at Cumming Elementary School.
>
> "I further authorize any health care provider and professional staff working for the clinic to provide such medical tests, diagnoses, procedures, and treatments as are reasonably necessary or advisable for the medical evaluation and management of my child's health care."

The form does not clarify who determines what services are "reasonably necessary or advisable" and does not explain how parents will be involved in that process. It states:

> "I understand that my signing this consent allows the health care provider and professional clinic staff of Georgia Highlands Medical Services at Cummings Elementary Schools to provide comprehensive health services which includes physical and behavioral health services."

Again, the form does not clarify what specifically falls into the category of "physical and behavioral health services" or how parents will be involved in the determination for what services their child may need.

"I think about my own kids when they were in school," Johnson said, "how easily they could have been swayed to get a vaccine or a medical treatment just because an adult told them that they should."

"It's really dangerous to have all of these things offered to them without the parents even being aware," she said. "A lot of kids — most kids — are compliant. They want to do what the adults are telling them to do."

According to the CDC, a key component of its Whole School, Whole Community, Whole Child model, which includes SBHCs, is "family engagement."

However, the agency's 37-page document about family engagement mentions parental permission only once and does not discuss parental consent for medical treatment beyond the application of sunscreen during recess.

According to a CMS spokesperson, SBHCs "follow the same practices as any other medical center or Medicaid or Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) provider … including parental consent requirements."

The spokesperson did not go into detail on whether consent would be requested generally or for each specific medical treatment.

Order Now 'The Wuhan Cover-up' by RFK Jr.!

Where's the regulatory oversight?

Tanguay pointed out that SBHCs exist without proper regulatory oversight.

According to Stand for Health Freedom, a nonprofit "dedicated to protecting informed consent in medical care," SBHCs are "completely unregulated."

For instance, it is presently unclear how HIPAA law (the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996) and FERPA law (the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act) will be applied to SBHCs and students' health information.

Stand for Health Freedom also pointed out that although in-school clinics may relieve busy parents of the burden of taking their children to the doctor, "medical ethics do not allow physicians to treat minors without a parent or guardian present, which is why parents cannot simply drop their child off at the doctor's office and come back later to collect them."

Stand for Health Freedom said:

> "Parents must engage politically and work with state health freedom leaders to ask lawmakers to either ban SBHCs in favor of the existing limited school-nurse model, or place guardrails on SBHCs to protect parental consent and involvement in their minor children's medical care."

Meanwhile, proponents of SBHCs, such as the School-Based Health Alliance, argue that SBHCs are a "powerful tool for achieving health equity among children and adolescents who unjustly experience disparities in outcomes simply because of their race, ethnicity, or family income."

Johnson said she disliked being "so skeptical of something that may potentially benefit some people" but added, "as a parent, it is your job and your right to be a part of the decisions that affect the health and well-being of your child."

Johnson said parents who experienced or witnessed vaccine injury would be particularly skeptical of putting medical decisions in the hands of government agencies, including schools.

"And the COVID response created even more skeptics," she said, adding:

> "It's unfortunate that we have to approach this [SBHCs] with the thought, 'How could this be abused?' But that's where we are."

The Defender on Aug. 3 reached out to the School-Based Health Alliance to ask how parental consent in SBHCs is handled and what they'd like parents who may feel distrustful of the U.S. medical system to know about SBHCs. The alliance did not respond by our publication deadline.

Subscribe to The Defender – It's Free!

First Name.. Last Name.. Email.. SIGN UP

SUGGEST A CORRECTION

Suzanne Burdick, Ph.D.
Suzanne Burdick, Ph.D., is a reporter and researcher for The Defender based in Fairfield, Iowa. She holds a Ph.D. in Communication Studies from the University of Texas at Austin (2021), and a master's degree in communication and leadership from Gonzaga University (2015). Her scholarship has been published in Health Communication. She has taught at various academic institutions in the United States and is fluent in Spanish.

Sign up for free news and updates from Children's Health Defense. CHD focuses on legal strategies to defend the health of our children and obtain justice for those injured. We can't do it without your support

Republishing Guidelines

Donate Now
You make the difference.

Latest News

Dr. Pierre Kory: Why We Wrote the USA Today Op-ed on Excess Deaths — and Why We Never Mentioned 'Vaccines'

CRISPR Gene Editing: New Evidence of 'Potentially Irreversible Safety Risks'

'A Fauci Clone': New NIAID Director Oversaw Remdesivir Trials, Has Ties to Biosafety Lab Research

MORE NEWS

Latest Views

What's Behind the Rapid Spread of Red Meat Allergy — Ticks? Vaccines? Something Else?

Review Adds to Evidence That Glyphosate Weedkillers Cause Cancer

New Book by Doctors for COVID Ethics Details Dangers of mRNA Vaccines

MORE VIEWS

Get FREE News & Updates!

First Name..
Last Name..
Email..
SIGN UP

Get Text Alerts
Sign up for breaking news from The Defender.
Currently only eligible for numbers in the U.S. and Canada.
1234567890
Phone
REQUIRED. Phone number must be in a standard 10-digit format: 1234567890 or 123-456-7890
CONTINUE

Children's Health Defense Comment Policy
We welcome relevant and respectful comments. Off-topic comments may be removed.
Please read our Comment Policy before commenting.
Got it

47 Comments Login

Join the discussion…

LOG IN WITH OR SIGN UP WITH DISQUS
Name

4 • Share Best Newest Oldest

kris 7 days ago
And watch if the kid tries to refuse a certain treatment, all they have to do is send the kid to the shrink? I mean there's absolutely no way at to refuse that medical procedure they completely removed the adult guardian and parental consent.
18 0 Reply • Share ›

> Caroline Cary Davidson → kris 7 days ago > right?! scary stuff indeed!
> 4 0 Reply • Share ›

Peggy Nieto 7 days ago
I see BAD written all over this one....parents are going to be kept in the dark, and this slippery slope will lead to disaster. The schools are not parents and should not be making healthcare decisions for children. The parents are the only people who should be making those decisions and choices.
15 0 Reply • Share ›

Kate Kavanagh 7 days ago
How about decent school lunches and outdoor recess instead? This is a ploy to add to the 72 plus doses of useless and often deadly vaccines. Apparently, they're not causing enough damage. There was a story on Facebook recently about school lunches in Italy. THEY are amazing. It can be done.
14 0 Reply • Share ›

Jen 7 days ago
Wow, all I can say to this is NO!
14 0 Reply • Share ›

Amanda B 7 days ago
First it will be voluntary and then it will be mandated.
13 0 Reply • Share ›

> Brian Collecott → Amanda B 6 days ago
> In order to protect others, of course - the guilt card played.
> 1 0 Reply • Share ›

Co-Reigner 7 days ago
Schools should NOT have health clinics. They already have school health nurses that really are people that work in partnership with CPS and other state/fed agencies.
13 0 Reply • Share ›

> Izzy Wright → Co-Reigner 5 days ago
> Agreed. If any of this was legit, we could offer more community clinics, without attaching them to the schools, while keeping proper handling of minors' healthcare and parental rights.
> 0 0 Reply • Share ›

holisticpoet 7 days ago
The nine most feared words in the English language: "I'm from the government and I am here to help." Ronald Regan. If you can take your kids out of governmental indoctrination centers they call public schools. The risks far outweigh the benefits.
12 0 Reply • Share ›

Christine Vigneri 7 days ago
yet another way for the govt. to circumvent and erode parents' rights.
11 0 Reply • Share ›

BoredHousewife 7 days ago
Agree, it sounds like a nice thing in principal. However, we've learned that we can't have nice things because there's a high likelihood of abuse. Vaccinations, abortions, hormones, ADHD meds, ... the list of "beneficial treatments" that will be given to these children without parental consent is long, serious, and frankly obvious to anyone who has been paying the slightest bit of attention for the last five years.
10 0 Reply • Share ›

Christine 7 days ago
If this comes to our local neighborhoods, we will need to be posting signs and getting the word out to parents. They get those inscrutable forms and think they have to do it. The kids think whatever is happening they have to go along with.
9 0 Reply • Share ›

> Caroline Cary Davidson → Christine 7 days ago
> a mom of a special needs kid, told me that such a form was sent home to her (Indianapolis area) and it also was designed to give permission to bill their insurance. public schools have ZERO need to have your child's medical insurance information.
> but you're totally right; lots of parents either will think its some kind of compulsory thing or just completely misunderstand what they are signing.
> 10 0 Reply • Share ›

Naga 7 days ago
TERRIBLE idea. Parents need to stop this on in its tracks.
8 0 Reply • Share ›

Caroline Cary Davidson 7 days ago
I am SO GLAD that my youngest only has 1.5 semesters left in public high school (if that; we may pull him out for various other reasons.) this is the 3rd year since the school opened (a huge, 2000 student 'central' high school, that incorporated 3 previous diverse neighborhood schools. the move was controversial & protested yet went ahead anyway, of course). midway thru last school year, they opened one of this school-based clinics in the building. the idea that ANY students lacked access to medical care in our area is beyond absurd. there are clinics & urgent care facilities every couple of miles, literally!
thank goodness my 17 yr old knows better than to fall for any of this crap! (he has a brother with autism and was himself vax injured as an infant - he's had NO jabs of any kind since he was 12 months old.) however we have a very large Spanish-speaking population whom I fear may fall prey to this, even though all forms are offered in Spanish. subtilties may be lost in translations. look at the trick already going on, with this 'announcement' bs. heck, our state's health department send out what amounted to advertisements for the HPV jab, like 5 years ago. many parents may think its required.
I feel so bad for all the parents of younger kids who are going to lose more and more control over their kids' lives and won't even realize it.
7 0 Reply • Share ›

Catalina Scott 7 days ago
This is a very bad idea. In my local area, they were staging temporary covid clinics at schools for junior high and H/S kids to get the shot "voluntary". Parents were calling into our local radio shows saying kids were being incentivized with a free grade or favors from the school to get the shot onsite. For kids trying to curry favor from teachers and administrators, this is unnecessary pressure on kids.
7 0 Reply • Share ›

> Caroline Cary Davidson → Catalina Scott 7 days ago
> yup, they actually had a what amounted to a 'kiddie carnival' type event to push the jab in our school district, complete with all kinds of treats, a DJ, goodie bags. when the jab first rolled out, they had the drive-thru parking lots assembly line thing going on for adults, which was advertised through our emergency alert text messaging system (think Amber Alerts), telling people 'no ID required', directly targeting low income folks in Gary Indiana. it was mind boggling.
> 3 0 Reply • Share ›

CreoleGumbo 6 days ago
Schools exist to teach the 3 Rs NOT to provide health care AND NOT to feed children.
6 0 Reply • Share ›

Brave Freedom 7 days ago
I would hope that the educated people on this blog would clearly see that this is an attempt to force vaccinate every child that comes to school without parental consent every time a Pharma Pimp puts out a new "vaccine".

They want some nurse not even an RN to start giving out shots. How transparent.

RFK Jr should sue to stop this nonsense and we should help him.
6 0 Reply • Share ›

MultiChubby1 7 days ago
In the 60's they were calling folks tin foil hats when they were trying to oust the marxist professors from the colleges. Should have listened.
5 0 Reply • Share ›

Bill Rood 7 days ago
CMS was a major enforcer of Covid protocols that included Remdesevir, ventilators and denied doctors like Paul Marik the ability to prescribe Ivermectin for his hospitalized patients at Sentara. CMS should be abandoned and replaced by county agencies.
5 0 Reply • Share ›

Franz Kafka 7 days ago edited
Trudeau the Second, as he is known by adoring Canadians, once instructed parents, in a television harangue, to leave the room as he wanted to be alone with their children. The police of course know of this proclivity of Tu*deau the Second but they are not talking.
It is alleged that Justin was not allowed to be alone with HIS OWN children without witnesses being present. So this move should surprise no one.
4 0 Reply • Share ›

justoldog 7 days ago
they are probably counting on some enraged parent to shoot up the "health center" so they can come down hard on gun owners.
4 0 Reply • Share ›

chris 7 days ago
This is actually a SOCIALISTIC system to take over, the FUTURE, the children, unless the children find GOD... That's what is in Eastern Europe, every school has a 'health office' to which you, clueless child will be called in the middle between the classes in order to get, vaccines.... The one scary thing is I do not recall most of my own childhood, but these moments waiting in the queue to be the next one jabbed, will never go away! And you think I was talking about it to my own parents??? Never recall doing it either! It was the OLD normal!!! Was always wondering while despite of it all, I'm still here...
4 0 Reply • Share ›

Ricky Ricardo 6 days ago
My "Health Center" is inside my own body; so are the children's. Leave the kids alone!!!
Big Pharma reminds me of the Pied Piper...leading the little children to their death and destruction!
Injecting a newborn baby with anything - is a evil as it gets!
3 0 Reply • Share ›

David Richard 6 days ago
Big Brother has now become Big Mother -- and Father!

Parents are held responsible for the well-being of their children in every court of law, as children are deemed incapable of making informed consent choices. Yet these initiatives impinge directly upon this responsibility, giving it to the State as manifested through the public school system. The charter of our public school system is education, not healthcare.

Following the money trail, this is a basic Big Pharma attempt to capitalize financially on mandated healthcare choices, not informed consent, parental-directed healthcare choices.

A better option is subsidized healthcare clinics in poorer communities, including with self-directed complementary and alternative healthcare choices. Better still, healthy school food programs in all our school systems! There is no RDA for drugs or vaccines. Our kids need healthy food.

Beware of this wolf in sheep's clothing.
2 0 Reply • Share ›

Paul Hastilow 7 days ago
Schools are for Teaching Kids…period.!
Clinics & Hospitals are for "Sick People"…period.!
Parents are for "Looking after their Children and their Health"…period.!
Government are the Servants of the Public and should stick to maintaining Law and Order, along with Societies Functioning with minimal interference.
Why try to Fix something that is Not Broken.?
This smacks of yet more Totalitarianism. !
The Next Election can't come soon enough….!
Time for a good clear out. The Lunatics are running the Asylum.
2 0 Reply • Share ›

kris 7 days ago
This makes no sense. Anyone who has ever been truly sick will tell you they had to take an active role in their healing.. patients often times need second opinions.. a child should talk to their parents first except in the most extreme examples where their parents are the problem.. and there are already school counselors for that. This is very sad :(
2 0 Reply • Share ›

ABoleynGirl 7 days ago
What could go wrong?
2 0 Reply • Share ›

> Rose White → ABoleynGirl 7 days ago
> Everything!!
> 3 0 Reply • Share ›

Gary Brown 6 days ago
AUG 8, 2023 URGENT: Italian researchers find Covid vaccine myocarditis relapses in teenage boys following apparently complete initial recovery

The mRNA shots are the gift that keeps on giving. At best, we may be monitoring a lot of teens and young adults for heart damage for a long, long time.

https://alexberenson.substa...

see more

👍 1 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

Brian Collecott
6 days ago

Does anyone recall the dangerous plan some years ago when US pharma wanted to pre-medicate all teenagers against 'possible' mental illness?

👍 1 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

CAWS → Brian Collecott
2 days ago

No but I remember TX wanting to put lithium in the water....

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

boydconklin
7 days ago

Massachusetts and Big Pharma, two peas in a pod.
"Help Stop the Proposed School Vaccine Bills!
HB604 and SB1391 would delete the religious exemption for K-12th grade students from the current vaccine law, completely eliminating the exemption for students at both public and private schools. This exemption has been part of the MA vaccine statute for decades.
HB2151/SB1458 would keep the exemption but would require all exemption requests to go through the MA Department of Public Health.
We oppose these bills for these reasons:
They would eliminate religious exemptions, result in decreased accountability and increased government bureaucracy, shame schools and parents, and allow minors to consent to vaccination without their parent or guardian's consent or knowledge.
Take Action: Email or call your MA legislators and ask them to oppose these coercive and discriminatory vaccine bills.
Dear Senator/Representative Last Name,
I am writing to ask you to oppose HB604, titled An Act relative to routine childhood immunizations, SB1391 An Act relative to vaccines and preventing future disease outbreaks, and HB2151/SB1458, titled An Act promoting community immunity, by voting NO if this legislation makes it to the floor for a vote and by asking members of the Joint Committee

see more

👍 1 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

Meave G. → boydconklin
6 days ago

I don't see how this could pass constitutional muster. How is this not restricting the free exercise of religion?

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

Someone
7 days ago

I agree that health centers at schools in the current climate would be a bad idea but I do think that they could be a benefit to rural and low income communities when informed consent is properly handled. But sadly this won't happen as long as parents are seen as barriers rather than as the vital part of a child's health that they are and informed consent is seen as optional rather than absolutely necessary to the care of any human being, adult or child.

👍 1 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

CAWS
2 days ago

Not about engaging families or medical equity. It is about pushing vaccines, removing parental consent and scamming medicaid with unnecessary treatments. They have been pulling this since I was a child in the 50s. Look up the Aspen dental lawsuits from the "care" they gave kids without consent in schools. Never take your kid to a medicaid dentist; they just make up stuff and lie to your face. Now they just want to make it legal and maybe federal law. NO WAY ! My kids & grand kids have been drilled that they are not to receive ANY medical or dental treatment at school as we have our own doctors. If they are pressured they are to call us and if refused they are to fight back and RUN to get help. Of course with all the other horrors going on in schools these days I would be forced to home school if I had kids.

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

CastleConnell
3 days ago

The state taking away parental authority. The kids are being sacrificed to the pressure of Pharma.

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

francois delmar
3 days ago

A person has to be 21 to buy cigarettes and to buy alcohol I know is at least 18 years of age. That's when one' can join the military and vote, which makes a good case for 18 being the age when a person can decide what type of treatments , medical and otherwise, he/she may want or need. I don't really trust the state and educational institutions to make decisions for the good of the people; they have shown themselves to be...well...almost anti-human.As strange as that might sound. Or surprising. And very disappointing.

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

Dr. Olivier Godichet
3 days ago

Fundamental mistake of the paradigm: much - much (Pareto cut the remains, residues, etc.

Fundamental system of forces

1) joining; ensure meeting but largest distance, lower strenght
2) within

2). 1 diverging +7+, - /-

2). 2. matching +/-, -/+
3)

There the basic system

Fundamental forces

1) gravity, 2) electromagnetic, 3) weak interartion, 4) strong interaction possibly the fifth : granulating?

Level up, seek analogies, specify according the culster of physical data.

see more

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

brbg
4 days ago

Globalist plan to remove parents from any control over their own children.

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

francois delmar → brbg
3 days ago

Probably, and sincerely and idealistically for a segment who think this is one step that will make earth a Garden of Eden, but for the "unwashed masses" (ie, not millionaires or billionaires or trillionaires) it is just one more brick on the road to Hell.

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

Izzy Wright
5 days ago

They almost tricked me into signing one of those blanket consent forms a few years ago. Right before COVID closed the schools, my son was in one of the Columbus (Ohio) City Schools preschools (at Moler Elementary). They had just started a school-based health clinic at the school. They said he needed a developmental screening and that they wanted to double-check his hearing. But the permission form his teacher wanted me to sign was worded similarly to the example from Georgia in the article, and gave general consent to medical treatment. I insisted on a one-time permission form for the specific screenings only, and I insisted on being present at the school. A few weeks later, those blanket consent forms were sent home to all the parents. His older brother was already schooling at home to better fit his needs. I pulled my younger son from public school permanently at the start of the COVID psyop, but I had already decided he would not attend Kindergarten in a brick and mortar public school. Both of my children have been thriving educationally at Ohio Virtual Academy.

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

nick quinlan
6 days ago edited

Pharma is relentless in their attack upon our children, they will resort to any and all despicable means to get their poison into every child. They have captured our govt, the entire educational system, from Kindergarten, to university, and our media, and the entire health care system. It's a horrifying reality they are attempting to erect around us all.
They have no liability, and they are on the path to eliminating informed consent, and trying to remove parents from the equation entirely.
People are fleeing from all vaccines, and rightly so. Their vaccine agenda is collapsing before their very eyes, and this is their response? People lose faith and trust because of all of the lies, fraud, and deceit surrounding vaccines, so they go full authoritarian in response.

This is the most evil, fraudulent, criminal industry that ever existed.

👍 0 👎 0 Reply • Share ›

Larry Cox
7 days ago

The argument I've heard is that a fair amount of kids are terrorized by their parents due to neglect or abuse. And according to statistics I've seen, this could be true for from 1/4 to 1/2 of all kids. This is a problem for parents rights groups. It will need to be addressed.

👍 0 👎 1 Reply • Share ›

Brave Freedom → Larry Cox
7 days ago

Larry that is nonsense.

1/2 of All kids are abused? LOL Sounds like something Father Shenanigan would say so he could have access to the little boys.

Let's try something novel like teaching math instead of making these embicilic teachers believe they are "providers" too

Children's Health Defense®

Children's Health Defense® is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. Our mission is to end childhood health epidemics by working aggressively to eliminate harmful exposures, hold those responsible accountable and establish safeguards to prevent future harm. We fight corruption, mass surveillance and censorship that put profits before people as well as advocate for worldwide rights to health freedom and bodily autonomy.

THE DEFENDER IS AVAILABLE IN:

ENGLISH SPANISH PORTUGUESE GERMAN ITALIAN FRENCH

TAKE ACTION

DONATE FREE SIGN-UP BECOME A MEMBER

Donations are tax deductible to the full extent of the law. EIN #26-0388604

© 2016 - 2023 Children's Health Defense® • All Rights Reserved • Sitemap

We use cookies to ensure that we give you the best experience on our website. You consent to our cookies if you continue to use our website. OK Privacy Policy